PRODUCT QUALITY & DEFECTS

The vinyl record manufacturing process involves inherent variability.

Burlington Record Pressing will take every reasonable step to ensure the highest quality but cannot guarantee perfection in all aspects of production.

Defects:

- Burlington Record Pressing employs a rigorous inspection process to ensure high-quality products. Once test pressings are approved, they will be considered defect free.
- Burlington Record Pressing reserves the right to stop production to observe the cause of any defect detected during the manufacturing process.
- While Burlington Record Pressing places equal emphasis on aesthetics and functionality, our primary objective is ensuring high-quality playback and playability. While we limit and reject small manufacturing defects throughout the process anything not affecting playback will be passed in the production run.
- Minor visual flaws that do not affect playback quality are not considered defects.
- Exact color matching is not guaranteed. Due to machinery limitations custom colors may vary. Color blemishes or inconsistencies are not considered defects as they do not diminish playback or sound quality.
- Any defect affecting playback not found to be present on the approved test pressings must be reported within ten (10) business days of receipt. Burlington Record Pressing will replace defective products or provide credit on a future order upon return of the original pressing. Replacement or credit for defective products will be limited to the value of the order and does not include liability for consequential damages. Refunds will not be issued.
